MISCELLANEOUS READING.

ICE-MAKING BY STEAM. We learn from our London exchanges, that Mr. Harrison, of Geelong, colony of Victoria, has invented an ice making machine, driven by steam power, capable of turning out ten thousand pounds of solid ice per day. The process is very simple, as will be seen by the following description: "The refrigeration is produced by the evanoration of ether in a vacuum; and the peculi arity of the invention consists in the ar rangements for evaporating the ether at a ow temperature, and condensing it at a higher, precisely the reverse of ordinary evaporating processes. The ether is contained in air-tight vessels relieved from the pressure of the atmosphere. The cylinder in the centre of the apparatus is fitted with valves, so that each stroke of the piston withdraws a quantity of ether vapor from the left-hand vessels, and forces it into a condensing vessel on the right hand. Where the vapor is raised, an intense cold is produced; where it is condensed, a corresponding degree of heat is evolved. The ether, after resuming the liquid state, returns by a self regulating valve to the evaporating vessel, and the process thus continues uninterruptedly, without requiring any attention, and without the slightest waste of material." The expense of the process is merely that of the motive power; the ice is formed in block moulds of any size required. This invention will be invaluable in hot climates. where ice is a priceless luxury, and has to be transported from northern climes at an immense cost, and is then only obtainable on the sea-board; whilst by this new method it can be made anywhere at an outside cost of two dollars and a half per ton. In tropical countries, where fevers prevail, ice is one of the necessary adjuncts to the effecting of cor, of King and Alfred sts. cures, and were it really obtainable, how many valuable lives might be saved. Nor does the utility of the invention rest on making ice alone, for it is applicable to the cooling of meats, and the saving of provisions in hot climates, and many other purposes, where a reduction of temperature is required. Mr. Harrison will indeed become entitled to the appellation of a benefactor to society .-

Porter's Spirit of the Times. BEER VS WINE.

A letter from Paris, June 24, in the Philadelphia Gazette, says the wholesale wine merchants at Bercy cannot even yet make up their minds to lower their pretensions, although the public appear to have deserted H OCK AND SODA—I have just procured them to a degree unparalleled at any former period in this country. "The change which and are now ready to supply the public with has come over the habits of the people in Hock and Soda, which is both a healthy and delicious drink.
